TOP Inspiration

Banker to the Poor

MUHAMMAD YUNUS

"Each individual person is very important. Each person has tremendous potential. She or he alone can influence the lives of others within the communities, nations, within and beyond her or his own time."
~ Muhammad Yunus.

In 1983, Muhammad Yunus, Ph.D. a Bangladeshi economist, fuelled by the belief that credit is a fundamental human right, founded the Grameen Bank. An institution that provided microcredit to the poor who possessed no collateral and helped them establish creditworthiness and financial self-sufficiency. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Peace in 2006, along with Grameen Bank, for his Herculean effort.

During the prize announcement, The Norwegian Nobel Committee mentioned:

Muhammad Yunus has shown himself to be a leader who has managed to translate visions into practical action for the benefit of millions of people, not only in Bangladesh, but also in many other countries. Loans to poor people without any financial security had appeared to be an impossible idea. From modest beginnings three decades ago, Yunus has, first and foremost through Grameen Bank, developed micro-credit into an ever more important instrument in the struggle against poverty.

From Dr. Yunus' personal loan of small amounts to destitute basket weavers in Bangladesh, overcoming everything from violent radical leftists to the conservative clergy who told women that they would be denied a Muslim burial if they borrowed money, the Grameen Bank advanced to the forefront of a burgeoning world movement to eradicate poverty through microlending.

Today, replicas of the Grameen Bank model operate in more than 100 countries worldwide.
